Marin senior housing -biomed development advances

A proposed expansion of the BioMarin Pharmaceutical campus and creation of a senior housing center in downtown San Rafael cleared a crucial design hurdle with unanimous approval from the city Design Review Board,

Proposed for 999 Third St., the building is set to have two 70-foot-tall, four-story BioMarin research and development buildings on a currently vacant lot of just over three acres.

The expanded BioMarin facility would include combined office and laboratory spaces on the ground floor with three stories of laboratory spaces above.

The project would also include and a 67-unit, 70-foot-tall, six-story building with a senior center and affordable senior housing That would be built on about one-third of an acre.
